Supporting Housing Professionals

Australasian Housing Institute

Your professional association...

Membership Information and Application Form

As a housing professional in Australasia you are one of more than 11,000 people working in paid and voluntary positions in public, community, Indigenous and supported housing services and tenancy advice. The AHI is your professional association: the only organisation spanning the entire housing sector, drawing together the people and the varied disciplines that together make up the modern housing system.

The AHI works with you and your colleagues across New Zealand and Australia to help you achieve excellence in your work, and the best possible outcomes for your tenants, communities and organisations.

Uniting and supporting housing professionals...

This is a time of radical change for our profession: system reform, organisation change, pressure on resources and a shifting customer dynamic. The AHI is at the forefront of reshaping what it means to be a housing professional. We play a unique role in:

1. Furthering recognition for housing professionals – shaping practice standards; increasing access to accredited social housing qualifications; and presenting peer-assessed awards for excellence
2. Facilitating connections and debate between colleagues across the profession – bringing together people with shared and complementary interests from different places, sectors, jobs and organisations
3. Providing new opportunities for professional development and advancement – enabling everyone across the spectrum of professional experience to share and build practice skills, ideas and approaches
4. Influencing housing policy and practice from the broadest possible base – maintaining and promoting a well-informed, balanced and responsive approach to housing issues

...through quality products and services...

AHI products and services are designed to support you to enhance your professional practice, maintain your motivation to contribute fully to professional life, and achieve personal career goals.

Our events program addresses topical issues for our profession. We deliver each workshop and seminar in both capital cities and regional centres, and on demand in the workplace. Our conferences and practice networks may focus on local issues or particular specialisations such as asset management or community renewal. Informal local member networks and activities are run by the Branch Committees.

We publish HousingWORKS our highly regarded journal four times a year. Our regular e-magazine Housing People broadcasts AHI and member news, and showcases your work and interests.

...and a diverse and active membership...

Every AHI member plays an important part in the success of the AHI through participation in events and networks, contributions to publications and debate, and achievements in social housing. As an AHI member the benefits for you are:

1. Connections with housing professionals locally, throughout Australasia and internationally and the chance to share ideas, practices and opinions with others from a variety of backgrounds
2. Influence – you will be an active player in shaping the AHI's engagement with policy makers and practice leaders, and in defining the future for your profession
3. Opportunities to enhance your professional practice through our professional development, information, training and practice initiatives and to work with your colleagues to shape what it means to be a housing professional in New Zealand and Australia
4. Discounts and freebies – including: discounted registration fees for all AHI seminars, conferences and workshops; free AHI publications and some special events; the National Building and Surveying Alliance Member Benefits Program, which offers special services and discounts on, for example, accommodation, car hire and airline clubs; tax deductible membership fee (in Australia).
