About AHI

The Australasian Housing Institute is the professional body for everyone who works in social housing across New Zealand and Australia.

The AHI unites and supports a vibrant and self confident social housing profession across New Zealand and Australia. There are approximately 11,000 people working in paid and voluntary positions in public, community, Indigenous and supported housing services and in tenancy advice.

The Australasian Housing Institute today:

- has a diverse and growing membership of more than 800 individuals;
- has active branches around Australia and New Zealand linking and supporting people locally;
- provides training and other professional development opportunities for more than 1400 housing professionals every year;
- recognises and rewards excellence in professional practice with the Housing Awards;
- acknowledges and sets standards for professionalism in social housing practice through the Professional Recognition Scheme;
- issues monthly electronic newsletter for housing professionals Housing People and produces the premier journal on social housing matters Housing Works.

Grow your people, grow your business

One of the keys to achieving a skilled, knowledgeable and flexible workforce is to empower individuals with the skills, knowledge and attitudes needed to be confident in their ability to do their job well and to help them develop their career. By becoming an AHI Corporate Member, you signal that your organisation fosters the personal and professional development of your staff by investing in them.

The AHI offers members the opportunity to:

- recognise skills, knowledge and experience through our Professional Recognition Scheme
- reward achievement through our Awards Program
- develop skills and knowledge through a Professional Development Program
- connect people through networking opportunities, online discussion forums and newsletters
- inform members through the HousingWorks magazine
- advance career development through accreditation of housing courses and the development of a housing workforce strategy

The AHI can play an important role in helping housing and human service businesses and organisations improve the productivity of their workforce and promote housing and human service work as a worthwhile career in an increasingly competitive labour market.

The AHI has established Corporate Membership to assist in partnering with businesses and organisations that are committed to positive career development principles and objectives. Corporate Membership gives you access to the networks and resources of the AHI.
